

SOFTWARE LICENSE TERMS

By downloading, copying, deploying, or using Flowless v1.0 (the "Software"), the purchaser accepts these terms. These terms apply to the original Software and any purchaser-created modifications.

01 License grant

Subject to payment and compliance with these terms, Flowless grants the purchaser a non-exclusive, non-transferable license to use the Software within one individual business or one organization. Any number of the licensed organization's internal users may use the deployed Software.

02 Permitted use

The purchaser may:

- copy the Software into its own Google Drive;
- deploy and operate it for internal workflows;
- modify its configuration and source code for internal use; and
- keep reasonable backup copies.

03 Restrictions

The purchaser may not sell, sublicense, redistribute, publish, share, or otherwise provide the original or modified template or source code to any third party. The template or source code may not be made publicly available for copying. A single license may not be reused for separate clients, affiliates, or other organizations. Each such organization requires its own license.

04 Ownership and customer data

Flowless retains all rights in the Software that are not expressly granted here. The purchase does not transfer ownership of the Software or its source code. The purchaser retains ownership and control of files and data stored in the purchaser's Google account.

05 Third-party services

The Software depends on Google Drive, Google Sheets, Google Apps Script, and related Google services. Those services are governed by Google's terms and may change, become unavailable, or impose quotas or administrative restrictions. Flowless is an independent product and is not affiliated with or endorsed by Google.

06 Support, updates, and customization

Unless expressly included in the product description, installation services, customization, data migration, and ongoing support are not included. Custom development may be purchased separately. The license covers Flowless v1.0 as delivered; future features, versions, or updates are not guaranteed.

07 Warranty and liability

To the maximum extent permitted by law, the Software is provided "as is" without warranties of uninterrupted operation, fitness for a particular purpose, or compatibility with future third-party changes. The purchaser is responsible for testing before production use and for maintaining backups. Flowless's total liability relating to the Software will not exceed the amount paid for the applicable license.

08 Refunds and termination

Because the Software is digital and copyable, purchases are non-refundable after access or download, except where required by law or determined by the payment platform. This license terminates upon a material breach of these terms. After termination, the purchaser must stop using the Software and delete distributable copies under its control.

09 Questions

Questions about licensing, client deployments, or customization may be submitted through the Flowless Gumroad product page.

This document is a practical software license provided with the product. Mandatory consumer rights and other rights that cannot legally be excluded remain unaffected.